"Mr. Wingfield was, as you remember, my friend in the gubernatoffal fight, and, of course, I supposed the meeting was to be in reference to my canvass, and we did, of course, talk on this subject. But, during the conversation, you will remember, he proposed to me to turn over certain delegates to me in the gubernatoral convertion, and he wanted me to agree to secure for Mr. Martin certain sel for W. E. Swan, on behalf of the torial convention, and he wanted me to agree to secure for Mr. Martin certain toembers of the Legislature to vote for fits for United States Senator, naming some five or six that he thought I could influence. I told him I did not own any member of the Legislature — any one else, and after considerable talk and telegraphing, he finally gave up the job of trying to get me to make any such attempted deal.

"I remember well you congratulating me on my not committing myself or consenting to such a thing, and you afterwards alluded to the incident in the vame terms. Now, I do not want to make it at all uncleasant to you, and will not use
